CELEBRATE THE LARGEST,
MOST COMPREHENSIVE MEETING OF
PHYSICIAN SCIENTISTS
IN THE WORLD

Leaders in Biomedical Science Joining Forces

In April of each year, AAP, ASCI, and APSA host the world's largest meeting for physician scientists. Together, the three professional societies represent physician scientists across the full career spectrum: from physician-scientist trainees to world-renown clinical investigators.

The Association of American Physicians (AAP)

Founded in 1885, the AAP has over 1,900 elected members with shared goals that include the pursuit of medical knowledge, and the advancement through experimentation and discovery of basic and clinical science and their application to clinical medicine.

The American Society for Clinical Investigation (ASCI)

Founded in 1908, the ASCI has more than 3,000 elected physician-scientist members. The ASCI seeks to support the scientific efforts, educational needs, and clinical aspirations of physician-scientists to improve human health.

The American Physician Scientist Association (APSA)

Founded in 2003, APSA is the largest peer support community for physician scientist trainees, representing more than 1,700 members. APSA strives to be the student physician-scientists' leading voice for improving educational opportunities, advancing patient-oriented research, and advocating for the future of science and medicine.

"...High impact keynote speeches, and a lot of the mentors/faculty level physician scientists who were supportive and communicative."

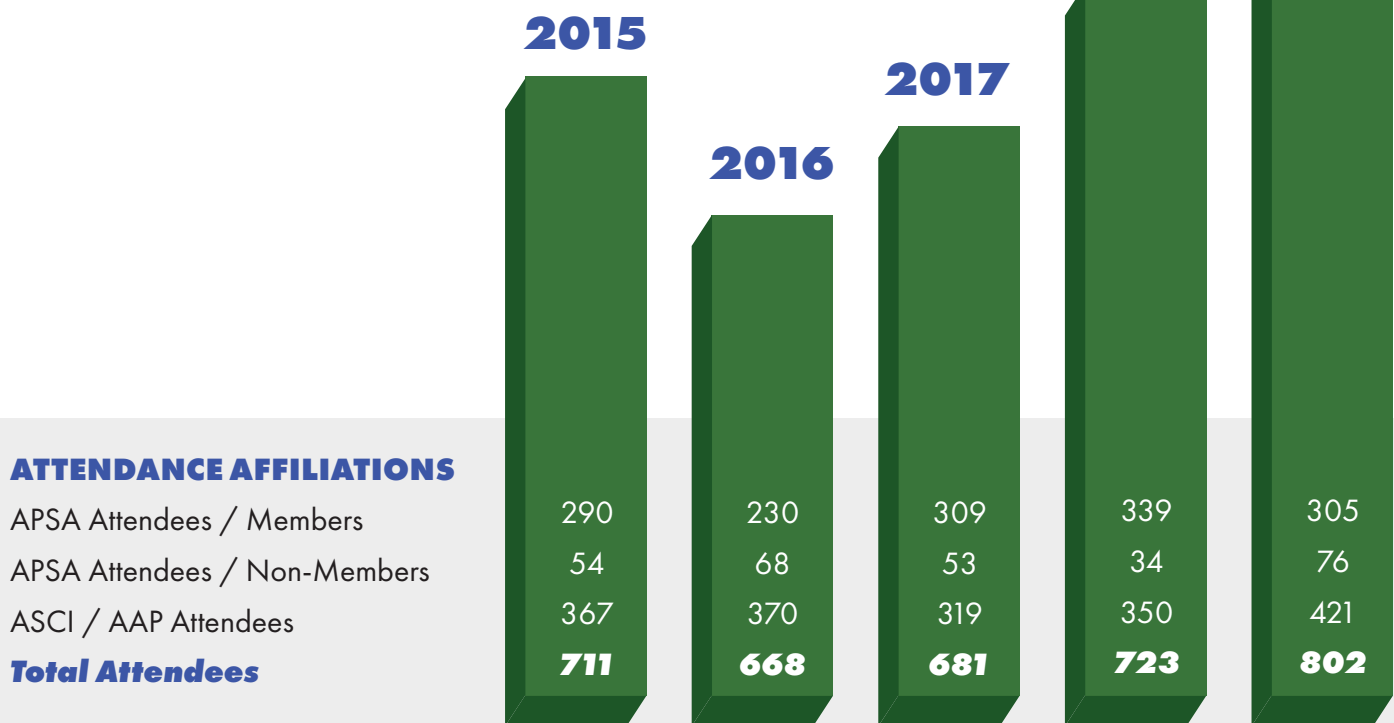

~APSA Member

"The Infectious Diseases Society of America (IDSA) is concerned by the continued decline in the number of trainees pursuing careers as physician-scientists and the attrition of junior and mid-career physician-scientists. We are pleased to continue to partner with APSA to promote the careers of physician-scientists and provide a variety of mentorship, educational and volunteer opportunities. In the field of infectious diseases, a robust cadre of research investigators is critical to confronting serious issues facing patients and public health."

"The size of this course is perfect. It allowed for a variety of presentations and topics within the theme but was small enough for all of the participants to meaningfully interact with one another."
